Come explore “The Great War” as well as its effect on Tennesseans and the world they knew. Activities include living history, crafts, trivia, and other family-focused activities that will allow visitors to explore life in the 1910s both at war and on the home front. Learn about life in the trenches and find out if you’d be able to hack it as a “doughboy”!

The event is free and open to the public. The program corresponds with the current exhibition “In the Footsteps of Sergeant York” on display at the Museum of East Tennessee History through July 8. The program will held at the East Tennessee History Center, 601 S. Gay Street, Knoxville.
